Additional knowledge/skills

1. Business and financial acumen: Candidate must interact with all levels of management within the channel partner. The deeper they understand a balance sheet, a P&L, how a company makes and spends its money, and business and finance, the more you can tailor and understand the challenges and opportunities for the various stakeholders in the partner.
2. The best BDRs have a deep understanding of the channel: There are numerous methodologies for the evolution of a channel: the ecosystem of partners, channel strategy, how to engage effectively, build and empower channels, generate leads, funnel, sell, implement and evaluate. The important thing is to adopt one, understand the essence of the elements and determine how to drive the right plans with partners.
3. Pick an area of expertise and be the best at it: Leverage this as a differentiator—is it verticals? Is it the cloud? Is it how they will enable partners to develop managed services? It likely depends on your background and your employer. The key is to identify your expertise and continuously cultivate that skill.
